Subject_or_Nature_of_Concern	Temporary election workers party identification
Comments	I was told that it will be taken under consideration to require temporary election workers to identify their party affiliation on their name badges. I hope the supervisors will consider the safety of the workers in these divisive times. While it is appropriate to assure the voters that the polling place roster of workers include both political parties, I do not want to be placed in jeopardy because my party is listed on my name badge. I would like to remain professional and neutral in the eyes of the voter.

I care that I work with professional, competent people that are considerate to each other and the public. This has been my experience for all the elections I have worked...do not open a door for more division where it is not needed. We have observers of both parties and this has never come up.

Please don't buy into more reasons to divide us. We've gotten to a point of fair, honest elections...keep it that way!

To whom this may concern,

While listening to a radio interview featuring Constance Hargrove we heard that they want to identify each poll worker by their political party on election day. This is a bad idea. We sincerely hope that you reverse this poor decision.
