#23 Homelessness

The PIT data consider only those "experiencing homelessness," not those experiencing the behavior of such persons who steal, cause anxiety in citizens because of their threatening behavior, leave trash or excrement on their property that must be cleaned up, or engage in vandalism. They prevent people from enjoying the parks or from enjoying a walk. How much does all of this cost? How much does it discourage new businesses from locating here? Hiring someone to clean up a mess cost me $120. On a couple of occasions I have had a $100 water bill because somebody used my outside water and didn't bother to turn it off. So I had to install a spigot lock. More cost and inconvenience. My level of sympathy for such a person's plight is about zero. Do supervisors care about the citizens who pay them?

#25/26

Managing the Grid

Whether AI can manage the grid instability that it causes remains to be seen. What happens when the engineers who understand these things retire, and we're left with people who have only used AI?

#33 and 34 are not about reproductive health but about attempting to mitigate the consequences of promiscuity. Sounds like it will promote abortion. I believe that more black babies get aborted. Is that a good disparity?

#4

CHEMPACKs

Does someone think a chemical attack is likely? Are we prepared to recognize it and know where the CHEMPACKs are and how to use them?
