Message Subject smoking ban

If you pass the law to ban smokers, get ready for the lawsuits that will cost you more than you will save. Discriminating against a group for their behavior is not a good idea. How many groups are there that push health insurance cost through the roof. You have to stop hiring diabetics who drink soda's, and homosexuals because of the cost of Aids, heart patients who eat red meat. If you hire any of these individuals, you are discriminating against smokers. And that is easy to prove in a lawsuit. People are getting upset with government trying to control people, and they are using the courts to get even. Think about what you are doing, you have a way of covering the cost, pass it on to the offenders, all of them not just smokers. The Supreme Court set the precedence with the Hobby Lobby decision, people have freedom, and when Government can achieve a goal without infringing on rights, they must do so. You may not like smoking, but that is too bad, this is America. Just think, the next politicians may decide that handicap people cost the state too much and we need to stop hiring them.
