

AGENDA MATERIAL

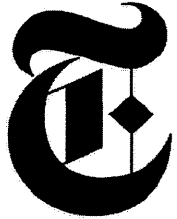

DATE 8/10/21 ITEM NO. RA 16

Barstool Sports

PIMA COUNTY

--New York Times Magazine, Nov. 14, 2017

- “Just to make friends with the feminists,” he’d written on the site, “I’d like to reiterate that we don’t condone rape of any kind at our Blackout Parties in mid-January. However, if a chick passes out, that’s a gray area though.”
- And: “Though I never condone rape, if you’re a Size 6 and you’re wearing skinny jeans, you kind of deserve to be raped, right?” The parties, which were held at private spaces near campuses, went ahead as planned. Portnoy issued no retractions or apologies. “I think the controversy probably helped us,” he says now. “Our fans liked that we didn’t back down. They realized that I was on their side.”

--Washington Post, June 29, 2018

- Portnoy, known on the site as “El Presidente,” said Ria Ciuffo, 20, an on-camera contributor for the company, would not “be able to put her face in front of a camera in five years, because people will throw up.”

The Daily Beast, Sept. 24, 2018

- Portnoy: “I guess when you hire somebody who calls themselves the Cervix Killer, who wears a Cervix Killer tshirt [sic] to the interview, you get Cervix killer [sic] stuff. Classic mix up on our part.” Cervix Killer was let go because, “Subtle sexual harassment is fine and dandy. Cervix killing in the DM’s though? Well that’s crossing the line.”

The Daily Beast, Sept. 24, 2018

Here are some examples of Barstool's output since Erika Nardini [new CEO] and the Chernin Group [new owners] came on board:

- Portnoy filmed a Barstool blogger in the shower without his consent, then called his employee “crazy” after he vigorously and repeatedly objected;
- he also told another 20-year-old employee her looks would deteriorate in five years, such that she wouldn't be worth putting in front of the camera (the employee fled the radio segment in tears);
- Portnoy wondered on-air if Harvey Weinstein should be able to offer roles in movies in exchange for consensual sex, and he wrote blog posts mocking the appearance of Deadspin's editor in chief and the editorial director of Gizmodo Media Group, both of whom are women;
- Portnoy, Katz, and another Barstool blogger argued that, awful or not, Corey Lewandowski saying “womp, womp”—because a 10-year-old with Down syndrome was separated from her parents at the border—was actually hysterical;

The Daily Beast list continued

- a clause in the contract offered to prospective female employees of Barstool stated that they would be unable to object to or be offended by “nudity, sexual scenarios, racial epithets, suggestive gestures, profanity, and references to stereotypes” in the workplace;
- Markovich wrote a blog post in which he described a 16-year-old girl as “hot,” and a Barstool Radio host described Olympian Chloe Kim, age 17, as a “little hot piece of ass” (the latter was fired);
- Barstool’s senior director of editorial strategy and growth wrote a blog post fat-shaming Rihanna (the post was deleted, and he eventually left Barstool);
- during “The Rundown,” a Fox Sports reporter told racist jokes while Portnoy, Katz, and Clancy chortled;
- the individual manning Barstool’s Twitch channel threatened to swat someone;
- Barstool’s main Twitter account shared a video in which Portnoy sang the N-word while Clancy cringed in the background;
- and a Barstool intern nicknamed “Cervix Killer” sent repeated and highly sexualized texts to another female intern.

Smokeshow

- Barstool regularly features photos of scantily clad young women who are called “smokeshows,” and another recurring blog post rates the sexual appeal of female teachers alleged to have molested underage male students.

CHICKS

BLOGS

VIDS

PODS

PICS

BLOGGERS

SHOWS

TOPICS

STORE

+

Search

My Feed

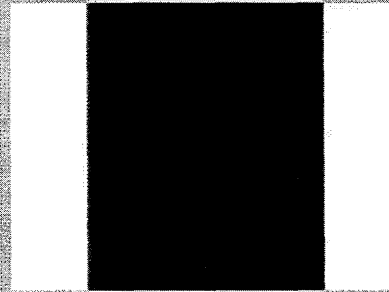

App

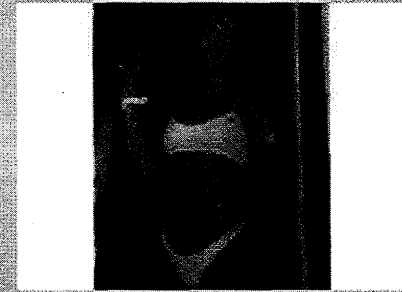

Barstool Chicago's Local Smokeshow Of The Day - Nicole

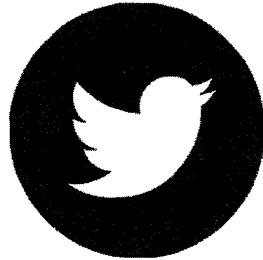

Barstool Local Smokeshow Of The Day - Liv From Boston

Barstool Monday AM Smokeshow of the Day — @erikaarldse...

Barstool Friday Smokeshow of the Day — @jordan_cornell...

Twitter

Dave Portnoy
@stoolpresidente

Free mogul advice to Fox Sports 1. Go all in with the sluts.
No dudes. 100% smokes all the time.

7:53 PM · Aug 17, 2013

46

7

Copy link to Tweet