While workforce exploration is valuable for teens, this is not the appropriate way to go about it. Please reject (vote no on) this program and the IMLS grant which would fund it and explore other real-world options to help teens get hands-on experience which will help them decide on job and career paths. JTED is a great program. Find them more funding. Offer employers county paid internships. I am sure you can find better ways to improve the teenage experience than with more screen time.
