Note of interest: The City of Tucson spends hundreds of thousands of dollars to also support The City of South Tucson. It should be noted that South Tucson is only 1 square mile (slightly smaller than the notorious City of London money-laundering hub, but five times the size of Vatican City) and it has its own mayor, council, city offices, police and related infrastructure. If they are not able to provide for themselves, perhaps they should be absorbed into the City of Tucson. They're within the city limits, so why not?

I would like to suggest that they have a conversation with your colleagues on the Tucson City Council about absorbing the City of South Tucson and relieving the County of this responsibility.
